

A Documented Chronology

Lobbying, corporate identity, and the ADAP employment-services contracts — the public record, in order

How to read this document

Method and discipline. Every entry in this document is a fact drawn from an official public registry, government record, or established news report, with its source named. The document places these facts in dated order. It draws no conclusions about anyone's motives or intentions, and makes no allegation of wrongdoing against any person or company. Where the record raises a question, the question is stated as a question and directed to the office equipped to answer it. Lobbying is a lawful, regulated activity; the existence of a lobbying registration documents that a party registered to communicate with government, not that any improper influence occurred.

What follows is a chronology assembled entirely from public records: Alberta's Lobbyist Registry, the B.C. and federal corporate registries, Government of Alberta announcements and caseload data, and established news reporting. Each entry is dated and sourced. The facts are placed in order so the sequence is visible. What the sequence means is left to the reader, and the open questions are directed, at the end, to the Auditor General — the office whose role is to examine them.

The chronology

Nov 9, 2022	Lobbying begins — parent company. Angus Knight Group (Australia) files its first Alberta consultant-lobbyist registration (CL-12989-01), filer Global Public Affairs, subject "Employment and Training." Departments lobbied include Alberta Seniors, Community and Social Services. Terminated May 31, 2023. Source: Alberta Lobbyist Registry, CL-12989-01.
Jun 9, 2023	Nixon appointed to the responsible ministry. Jason Nixon is appointed Minister of Seniors, Community and Social Services — the ministry being lobbied on this subject, and the predecessor of the ministry that would award the ADAP contracts. Source: Government of Alberta; Rimbey Review, Jun 9, 2023.
Jan–Feb 2024	Parent company's lobbying intensifies. Angus Knight Group files three further registrations (CL-13614-01, -02, -03) through Global Public Affairs, subject "Employment and Training." Departments lobbied again include Alberta Seniors, Community and Social Services, alongside Treasury Board and Finance, Advanced Education, and the Legislative Assembly. Source: Alberta Lobbyist Registry, CL-13614-01/-02/-03.
Feb 4, 2025	ADAP announced. The Government of Alberta announces the Alberta Disability Assistance Program (ADAP), to launch July 2026, under the then-named Ministry of Seniors, Community and Social Services. Source: Government of Alberta news release, Feb 4, 2025.
Apr 16, 2024	Maximus becomes AKG. The B.C. corporate entity Maximus Canada Employment Services Inc. (incorporation BC1291035) is renamed AKG Canada Employment Services Inc., effective this date. It is owned by Angus Knight Group of Australia. Source: OrgBook BC / B.C. Corporate Registry, BC1291035.

Dec 12, 2025	The contractor itself registers to lobby. AKG Canada — the entity that will hold the ADAP northern contract — files its own consultant-lobbyist registration (CL-14772-01) through Global Public Affairs, subject “Employment and Training.” Bodies lobbied include Alberta Assisted Living and Social Services (the awarding ministry); the registration records that MLAs / MLA staff and Executive Council were lobbied. Stated purpose: to introduce AKG Canada to government leaders and discuss “outcome-based workforce development” and “alignment with current government policies.” Source: Alberta Lobbyist Registry, CL-14772-01.
Mar 18, 2026	Contractor lobbying registration terminated. AKG Canada’s lobbying registration (CL-14772-01) is terminated. The undertaking period recorded on the registration ran Dec 9, 2025 to Feb 28, 2026. Source: Alberta Lobbyist Registry, CL-14772-01.
May 21, 2026	Cabinet shuffle. Jason Nixon is sworn in as President of Treasury Board and Minister of Finance. Nathan Neudorf is sworn in as Minister of Assisted Living and Social Services the same day, becoming the minister responsible for ADAP at launch. Source: Government of Alberta; CBC News, May 21, 2026.
Jun 26, 2026	Contracts revealed. Reporting on procurement documents discloses that two private prime contractors will run ADAP employment services: AKG Canada (Edmonton/north, ~$47M) and Serco Canada (Calgary/south, ~$51M), ~$98M combined, over five years. Source: CBC News, Jun 26, 2026.
Jul 1, 2026	ADAP launches. ADAP begins. An estimated 46,000 Albertans (drawn from an AISH caseload of ~80,000; the government has published no confirmed transition figure) are moved toward the privately-contracted system. Source: Government of Alberta, Open Government caseload data, March 2026; CBC News.

What the record establishes

Stated plainly, and claiming nothing beyond the documents: the documented record establishes that the Australian-owned corporate family behind the ADAP northern contractor was a registered lobbyist of the responsible Alberta ministry on the subject of “Employment and Training” across the period in which the ADAP program was conceived, announced, and developed — from the parent company’s first registration in November 2022, through the program’s February 2025 announcement, to the contractor’s own registration in December 2025. The contractor that would run the program was, by its own filing, communicating with the awarding ministry, with MLAs and their staff, and with the Premier’s Executive Council, about “alignment with current government policies” on workforce development.

The record also establishes that the contracting entity is the renamed former Maximus Canada Employment Services Inc., and that the ministry responsible for the program changed hands on May 21, 2026 — weeks before the contracts became public on June 26, 2026.

These facts do not, by themselves, establish that the lobbying influenced the program’s design or the award of the contract. That is precisely the question they raise — and it is a question the documented record cannot answer on its own. It requires access to the procurement file: the business case, the evaluation framework, the conflict-of-interest declarations, and the record of contact between the ministry and the contractor. Those records are sought through the accompanying Access to Information request, and the question of whether they were properly handled is put to the Auditor General.

The questions the record raises

1. Did the contractor's documented lobbying of the responsible ministry, during the program's development, have any influence on the design of ADAP's employment-and-training parameters or on the procurement that followed?
2. Were the lobbying communications logged in the procurement file, and what controls separated that contact from the evaluation of bids?
3. Was a business case or value-for-money analysis prepared before the contracts were awarded? (None has been located on the public record.)
4. Was the contractor's prior corporate identity — Maximus Canada Employment Services Inc. — and its performance history considered in due diligence?
5. What reporting, audit, and clawback provisions govern the approximately $98 million, and how will outcomes be publicly measured?

These questions are directed to the Auditor General of Alberta (info@oag.ab.ca) and pursued through an Access to Information request to the Ministry of Assisted Living and Social Services. This document makes no allegation; it assembles the record and asks that the record be examined.
