

Request to Stop the $200 CDB Deduction

For people actively applying who are not yet receiving the Canada Disability Benefit

WHO THIS IS FOR

Use this if AISH is deducting the $200 Canada Disability Benefit amount from your cheque while you are still applying for the DTC or CDB and have not received a decision. Fill in your details, send it to your AISH office, and keep a copy for your records. Everything this letter argues is quoted from the Government of Alberta's own published material, with the source named beside it.

Re: Request to stop the $200 Canada Disability Benefit deduction while my application is in progress

To Whom It May Concern,

I am writing about the $200 Canada Disability Benefit amount currently being deducted from my AISH benefit. I am actively applying for the following, and I have not yet received a decision:

- ☐ I have applied for the Disability Tax Credit (DTC)
- ☐ I have applied for the Canada Disability Benefit (CDB)
- ☐ My application is under review or they have requested more information from me

Date I applied

Decision expected

Anything else about my application (optional)

Maximum: 900 characters. If AISH lost or delayed your forms, say so here — it puts their error on the record.

I am not currently receiving any Canada Disability Benefit payment, because my application has not yet been decided. Despite this, $200 is being deducted from my AISH benefit as though I were already receiving the federal payment.

What follows is what the Government of Alberta has published about this, quoted in its own words.

1. I am required to apply for the CDB, and I have applied.

Your Guide to Disability Income Assistance, July 2026 — “Eligibility Criteria”:

“You and your spouse or partner must apply for all other income you may be eligible for, such as Canada Pension Plan (CPP), Canada Disability Benefit (CDB), Employment Insurance (EI) or Workers’ Compensation Board (WCB) benefits.”

I have done what this requires. My application is in progress.

2. What I must report is the outcome, and there is no outcome yet.

alberta.ca/aish-apply-for-federal-disability-supports:

“Albertans receiving AISH and ADAP must inform the program on the outcome of their CDB application.”

No decision has been made on my application. I will report the outcome as soon as I have one.

3. What may be subtracted is income I receive.

Your Guide to Disability Income Assistance, July 2026 — “Non-exempt income”:

“Non-exempt income is subtracted dollar-for-dollar from your monthly living allowance. It includes your income from: ... Canada Disability Benefit (CDB).”

I have no income from the Canada Disability Benefit. There is nothing to subtract dollar-for-dollar.

4. The amount taken from me is based on the absence of a federal decision.

alberta.ca/aish-apply-for-federal-disability-supports:

“If a decision on an AISH or ADAP client’s CDB application has not been made by February 28, 2026, $200 in CDB income was reduced from their AISH or ADAP benefits starting with their April 2026 benefits.”

When a federal decision is made is not within my control. On this wording, $200 I do not receive is being counted as “CDB income” and subtracted from my living allowance.

I am asking you to reconcile the above with my file, and I am requesting the following.

1. Stop the deduction while my application is in progress.

Please stop deducting the $200 Canada Disability Benefit amount from my benefit while I am actively applying and receiving no Canada Disability Benefit income. If the program's position is that the deduction continues in the absence of a federal decision, please confirm that in writing and identify the provision it rests on.

2. Confirm the authority and the calculation in writing.

Please confirm, in writing, the legal authority under which this $200 is being deducted from me, and provide a month-by-month accounting of every amount deducted to date.

3. Confirm in writing how the deducted amounts will be reconciled.

Please confirm, in writing, how the amounts already taken from me will be handled once my application is decided:

- If my application is denied, I will have received no Canada Disability Benefit, and I am requesting that every amount deducted be repaid to me in full as an underpayment.
- If my application is approved with back pay, I am requesting written confirmation that the amounts already deducted are credited against that back pay — and that any amount deducted that is more than the Canada Disability Benefit I receive is repaid to me — so that the same months are not recovered from me twice and I am not deducted more than I receive.

IF THE ANSWER IS NO

A refusal is a decision of a director. Under section 10.1(1) of the Assured Income for the Severely Handicapped Act, such a decision may be appealed unless it is exempt from appeal under the regulations, and the appeal must be made in writing to an appeal panel “within 30 days after the date on which the person receives notice of the decision.” Alberta lists “whether you have an underpayment — this is a benefit you did not get, but were eligible for” among the decisions the Citizen's Appeal Panel may review. The form is the Notice of Appeal, AAS13358, to the Appeals Secretariat: alss.appeals@gov.ab.ca, fax 780-422-1088, 780-427-2709 (in Alberta dial 310-0000 first). Under section 10.1(3) the Minister may extend the time where there are apparent grounds of appeal and a reasonable explanation for the delay.

I am keeping a copy of this letter for my records, and I would appreciate a written response.

Sincerely,
