

REQUEST TO STOP THE $200 CDB DEDUCTION — HOW TO USE IT

For people still applying, with no decision yet · Version 2.0, September 2026 (Classification: Public)

WHAT THIS FORM IS FOR

This letter asks AISH to stop taking the $200 Canada Disability Benefit amount off your benefit while your DTC or CDB application is still in progress, and to put in writing what will happen to the money already taken.

What changed in version 2.0. The earlier version said the writer understood the government to have stated that people actively applying should not have the amount deducted. That sentence is gone. In its place the letter now quotes four passages from Alberta's own published material, each with its source printed beside it. Nothing in it now rests on what anyone remembers being told.

It is forward-looking. It asks for the deduction to stop and for the reconciliation to be spelled out. If you want money already taken paid back as a settled claim, that is the Request for Repayment of a Benefit. Many people need both, and there is no harm in sending both.

BEFORE YOU FILL THIS OUT

Know which $200 you are arguing about. There are two, and they are not related. One is the CDB deduction this letter is about. The other is the transition benefit: Alberta says AISH clients who moved to ADAP in July 2026 "will receive a $200 monthly transition benefit that will keep their financial benefit the same as their existing AISH benefit amount until December 31, 2027." If a worker starts talking about the transition benefit, you are being answered about the wrong one. Say so.

What the letter argues, in short. You are required to apply for the CDB, and you have. What you must report is the outcome, and there is no outcome yet. What may be subtracted from your living allowance is income you receive — and you receive none. Yet the amount was taken on the basis that no federal decision had been made by a date you did not control. All four of those are quoted on page 2 with their sources.

Report your outcome the moment you have one, by the route Alberta names. The online form is on alberta.ca/aish-apply-for-federal-disability-supports, and your zone office will take it by email. Keep proof either way. The duty is about the outcome, so there is nothing to report until a decision lands — but the day it does, report it, and do not let that be the thing they answer you with.

Have your dates ready. When you applied for the DTC, when you applied for the CDB, when you last heard anything, and the month the $200 started coming off.

WHAT EACH SECTION IS ASKING FOR

In plain terms, section by section. You do not have to read it all — find the part you are stuck on.

Header — date, file number, office

Your AISH file number and the office that holds it. If you do not know the office, the letter still works: the Alberta Supports Contact Centre on 1-877-644-9992 can route it, and a letter sent to the wrong office and forwarded still carries the date you sent it.

Tick boxes — what you have applied for DTC applied, CDB applied, under review or more information requested. Tick everything true today. If you applied for the DTC but cannot apply for the CDB until it is granted, tick the DTC box and say so in the open box below — that sequence is the whole reason you are waiting.

Dates — applied, and decision expected

Give the date you applied. If nobody has given you an expected decision date, write "not provided" rather than guessing. A guessed date can be read back to you later as a commitment you made.

The open box (up to 900 characters)

Optional on the form, worth using. This is where delay that is theirs rather than yours goes on the record: forms they lost, information requested twice, a referral that was never sent, months of no contact. Dates and events, in short sentences.

Page 2 — the four quoted grounds

Do not edit this page. Its strength is that every claim on it is a quotation with a source, and a quotation survives a reply in a way a recollection does not. If a worker disputes any of it, they are disputing their own department's published wording, and that is the position you want them in.

Page 3 — the three numbered requests

Stop the deduction; confirm the legal authority and give a month-by-month accounting; and confirm in writing how what has already been taken will be reconciled — repaid in full if you are denied, credited against back pay if you are approved, and never recovered twice. Leave all three in. The third protects you whichever way the federal decision goes.

WHERE THIS GOES AFTER YOU SIGN ITYour AISH or ADAP office.

Email if you can, so the sent message dates it. North zone northzoneaish@gov.ab.ca · Central aish.centralregion@gov.ab.ca · Calgary calgaryaish@gov.ab.ca · South southaish@gov.ab.ca.

Not to the campaign.

We cannot stop a deduction on your file. Send us a copy only if you are also telling us your story.

Keep the sent copy and the date.

If the deduction continues, that date is the start of everything that follows.

WHAT HAPPENS NEXT

A reply that restates the February 28 rule is still useful to you. It is the program choosing, in writing, which of its own documents governs your file — and that is the document you would put in front of an appeal panel, an MLA or the Ombudsman.

If the deduction does not stop, it compounds, and every month of it is a potential underpayment if your application is later denied. Keep every monthly statement in one folder.

If you are approved with back pay, check the arithmetic yourself. What you are watching for is the same months being recovered twice, and any month where more than the CDB you were paid was taken.

If you are denied, the deducted amounts become a claim for repayment. Switch to the Request for Repayment of a Benefit, attach the denial letter, and reference this letter by its date. That refusal route is appealable; the 30-day clock runs from the decision letter.

WHAT NOT TO DO

Do not stop applying, and do not stop reporting. Alberta's guide requires you to "apply for all other income you may be eligible for." Keep doing it, and report the outcome when it comes. Do not hand them an easier answer than the one this letter asks for.

Do not add "it is my understanding that" to anything on page 2. Every line there is a quotation with a source. Softening it into a recollection is the one edit that makes this letter weaker.

Do not withhold your benefit or refuse to engage while you wait for an answer. It changes nothing about the deduction and it can put your eligibility in question.

Do not treat a phone call as the record. If you are told something useful on the phone, email the office the same day saying what you were told, by whom, and when.

Quoted passages are reproduced from Your Guide to Disability Income Assistance (Government of Alberta, July 2026), alberta.ca/aish-apply-for-federal-disability-supports, alberta.ca/alberta-disability-assistance-program and alberta.ca/appeal-aish-decision, all checked September 2026. General information, not legal advice.

Request to Stop the $200 CDB Deduction

For people actively applying who are not yet receiving the Canada Disability Benefit

WHO THIS IS FOR

Use this if AISH is deducting the $200 Canada Disability Benefit amount from your cheque while you are still applying for the DTC or CDB and have not received a decision. Fill in your details, send it to your AISH office, and keep a copy for your records. Everything this letter argues is quoted from the Government of Alberta's own published material, with the source named beside it.

Date

AISH File Number

To (your AISH office)

Re: Request to stop the $200 Canada Disability Benefit deduction while my application is in progress

To Whom It May Concern,

I am writing about the $200 Canada Disability Benefit amount currently being deducted from my AISH benefit. I am actively applying for the following, and I have not yet received a decision:

- ☐ I have applied for the Disability Tax Credit (DTC)
- ☐ I have applied for the Canada Disability Benefit (CDB)
- ☐ My application is under review or they have requested more information from me

Date I applied

Decision expected

Anything else about my application (optional)

Maximum: 900 characters. If AISH lost or delayed your forms, say so here — it puts their error on the record.

Request to Stop the $200 CDB Deduction (continued)

I am not currently receiving any Canada Disability Benefit payment, because my application has not yet been decided. Despite this, $200 is being deducted from my AISH benefit as though I were already receiving the federal payment.

What follows is what the Government of Alberta has published about this, quoted in its own words.

1. I am required to apply for the CDB, and I have applied.

Your Guide to Disability Income Assistance, July 2026 — “Eligibility Criteria”:

“You and your spouse or partner must apply for all other income you may be eligible for, such as Canada Pension Plan (CPP), Canada Disability Benefit (CDB), Employment Insurance (EI) or Workers’ Compensation Board (WCB) benefits.”

I have done what this requires. My application is in progress.

2. What I must report is the outcome, and there is no outcome yet.

alberta.ca/aish-apply-for-federal-disability-supports:

“Albertans receiving AISH and ADAP must inform the program on the outcome of their CDB application.”

No decision has been made on my application. I will report the outcome as soon as I have one.

3. What may be subtracted is income I receive.

Your Guide to Disability Income Assistance, July 2026 — “Non-exempt income”:

“Non-exempt income is subtracted dollar-for-dollar from your monthly living allowance. It includes your income from: ... Canada Disability Benefit (CDB).”

I have no income from the Canada Disability Benefit. There is nothing to subtract dollar-for-dollar.

4. The amount taken from me is based on the absence of a federal decision.

alberta.ca/aish-apply-for-federal-disability-supports:

“If a decision on an AISH or ADAP client’s CDB application has not been made by February 28, 2026, $200 in CDB income was reduced from their AISH or ADAP benefits starting with their April 2026 benefits.”

When a federal decision is made is not within my control. On this wording, $200 I do not receive is being counted as “CDB income” and subtracted from my living allowance.

Request to Stop the $200 CDB Deduction (continued)

I am asking you to reconcile the above with my file, and I am requesting the following.

1. Stop the deduction while my application is in progress.

Please stop deducting the $200 Canada Disability Benefit amount from my benefit while I am actively applying and receiving no Canada Disability Benefit income. If the program's position is that the deduction continues in the absence of a federal decision, please confirm that in writing and identify the provision it rests on.

2. Confirm the authority and the calculation in writing.

Please confirm, in writing, the legal authority under which this $200 is being deducted from me, and provide a month-by-month accounting of every amount deducted to date.

3. Confirm in writing how the deducted amounts will be reconciled.

Please confirm, in writing, how the amounts already taken from me will be handled once my application is decided:

- If my application is denied, I will have received no Canada Disability Benefit, and I am requesting that every amount deducted be repaid to me in full as an underpayment.
- If my application is approved with back pay, I am requesting written confirmation that the amounts already deducted are credited against that back pay — and that any amount deducted that is more than the Canada Disability Benefit I receive is repaid to me — so that the same months are not recovered from me twice and I am not deducted more than I receive.

IF THE ANSWER IS NO

A refusal is a decision of a director. Under section 10.1(1) of the Assured Income for the Severely Handicapped Act, such a decision may be appealed unless it is exempt from appeal under the regulations, and the appeal must be made in writing to an appeal panel “within 30 days after the date on which the person receives notice of the decision.” Alberta lists “whether you have an underpayment — this is a benefit you did not get, but were eligible for” among the decisions the Citizen's Appeal Panel may review. The form is the Notice of Appeal, AAS13358, to the Appeals Secretariat: alss.appeals@gov.ab.ca, fax 780-422-1088, 780-427-2709 (in Alberta dial 310-0000 first). Under section 10.1(3) the Minister may extend the time where there are apparent grounds of appeal and a reasonable explanation for the delay.

I am keeping a copy of this letter for my records, and I would appreciate a written response.

Sincerely,

Signature

Printed name

Email or phone

Request to Stop the $200 CDB Deduction (continued)

Quoted passages are reproduced from Government of Alberta publications as they appeared in September 2026: Your Guide to Disability Income Assistance (July 2026), alberta.ca/aish-apply-for-federal-disability-supports and alberta.ca/appeal-aish-decision. This letter contains general information, not legal advice.