

Consent to Release Information

Form AAS13391 · Rev. 2026-07 · Alberta Supports · accessible fillable working copy

Accessibility note — read this first

This is a fillable working copy that captures everything the official AAS13391 asks. It opens and fills on any phone, tablet, or computer. It is NOT an official Government of Alberta form. The official version is available from the Government of Alberta.

We built it because the government's own file carries a notice saying it must be downloaded and opened in Adobe Acrobat Reader, and that it will not work on a mobile device. For a great many people in this community, a phone is the only device there is.

Everything the official form asks is here, in the same order, with nothing added to the questions and nothing taken away.

If the office you are dealing with requires their own file, use theirs. Fill this in first so you are not doing it cold.

What this form does

This is the form that lets someone else deal with your file.

Without it, Alberta Supports will not discuss your case with your advocate, your support worker, your family member, your friend, or your MLA's office. They will not confirm what was received, what was decided, or what is missing. People find this out at the worst possible moment, usually when somebody is trying to help them and gets told no.

It also works the other way. You can use it to let one part of the system send information to another — a doctor's office to AISH, AISH to a housing body, a program to a lawyer.

Four things to know before you sign anything

You can cancel it at any time. The form says so. Revoking consent has to be in writing, but there is no cost and no reason required. Put a date on your cancellation and keep a copy.

Put an expiry date on it. The form has an expiry field. If you leave it open-ended, your consent runs until you cancel it. One year is usually sensible, or set it to the end of the process you need help with.

Be specific about what you are releasing. A consent that says "everything" releases everything. If you only want a decision letter shared, write that.

The official form's instructions are written for a worker, not for you. Read the government's page one and you will see it speaks about "the individual" in the third person, telling staff what to confirm with you. That is why this guide exists. This is your form and your decision.

What each part asks for, in plain terms

Work through this page before you start filling. Each heading matches a section of the form on the pages after it.

1. Which program

Tick every program the information touches. If you are on AISH and you are also applying for the Adult Health Benefit, tick both. Ticking too few is the common mistake, because the consent only covers what you ticked.

2. Your name and date of birth

Full legal name as the program has it. If your file is under a former name, use the name on the file and note the change in the reasons box.

3. Whose information is being released

Your own, or someone else's if you are their authorised representative. If you are signing for another person, you must complete the representative section at the end and state where your authority comes from.

4. What kind of information

Personal, health, financial, or a combination. Be plain: "my AISH file", "my medical report dated March 2026", "my decision letter and the rationale behind it". The narrower you write it, the less goes out.

5. Who is releasing it, and who is receiving it

Two separate boxes and people mix them up. Disclosed by is where the information is coming from. Disclosed to is who gets it. Name the organisation, not just a person, so the right staff can use it.

6. Why

One or two sentences. "So that my advocate can assist me with my appeal." "So that my housing application reflects my documented care needs." A reason that matches the information you listed above is harder to refuse.

7. Dates

Effective date is when it starts, usually today. Expiry is when it stops. Fill the expiry in. See the note on the previous page.

8. Signature

Sign it yourself if you can. If someone is signing on your behalf, they also print their name, state their relationship to you, and say what gives them the authority — guardianship or trusteeship order, personal directive, power of attorney, or your own written authorisation.

Who counts as an authorised representative

A guardian of a person under 18.

A guardian or trustee appointed for an adult under the Adult Guardianship and Trustee Act.

An agent named under a personal directive.

A person granted power of attorney.

A person with written authorisation from the individual to act for them.

If none of these apply to the person helping you, that is fine. They do not need to be your representative to be named as someone information can be released to. The representative section is only for someone signing instead of you.

The form

Fill this in on your phone, tablet or computer, then print it and sign it, or print it and fill it in by hand. Both work.

After you sign it — where it goes

This form does not come to The Alberta Disability System Breakdown. It goes to the program office that holds your file.

Where to send it

Give it to your worker or caseworker if you have one. This is the fastest route and it puts the consent on your file directly.

Alberta Supports Contact Centre — 1-877-644-9992, Monday to Friday, 7:30 a.m. to 8:00 p.m., except statutory holidays. Ring and ask where to send it for your program, and write down who told you.

For FSCD or PDD, send it to your FSCD or PDD staff representative rather than the general line.

Send a copy to the person you named in the "released to" box, so they can show it if the office says no consent is on file. This happens.

Keep a copy yourself, with the date you sent it and how you sent it.

Then do these three things

- Confirm it landed. Ring a few days later and ask whether the consent is on your file and from what date. Write down the name of whoever confirms it.
- Diarise the expiry. Put the expiry date in your phone with a reminder two weeks before. A consent that lapses mid-appeal is a problem nobody notices until someone is refused information.
- Keep the copy with your other paperwork. If you are ever told no consent exists, your dated copy and the name of the person who confirmed it is the answer.

If you want to cancel it later

Write to the same office. One line will do: I am revoking the consent to release information that I signed on [date], effective immediately.

Sign it, date it, keep a copy, and note how you sent it.

You do not have to give a reason and there is no cost.

What this document is, and is not

This is not an official Government of Alberta form. It is a fillable working copy built by The Alberta Disability System Breakdown so that people who only have a phone can read and complete it.

It reproduces the questions on AAS13391 Rev. 2026-07 as read on 13 September 2026. Nothing has been added to the questions and nothing removed.

The official file is published by the Government of Alberta. If the office you are dealing with requires their own file, use theirs.

Do not send this completed form to the campaign. Our email is for advocacy questions only, and your file information should not sit in a third party's inbox. If you have a question about filling it in, write to us with none of your personal information attached. We are glad to help with the how.

*Nobody can help you with a file they are not allowed to discuss.
This is the piece of paper that changes that.*
