

Source Index

Every document behind The Numbers They Gave Us and The ADAP Grid. What it is, who issued it, when, where it lives, and what was taken from it.

Why this document exists

Both companion documents make one claim about themselves: every figure in them was printed by the Government of Alberta or by Statistics Canada. Without this index that is an assertion. With it, it is checkable.

Every source below was opened at its origin. Nothing rests on a search result, a snippet, a summary or a secondary description of a document.

Where a source was gated, blocked or not reached, it is recorded in the final section rather than omitted. What was not checked is part of the record.

Research conducted 14 and 15 September 2026 across five phases.

Corporations Canada and Alberta Corporate Registry

Taken: Serco Canada Inc, corporation number 855586-9, federal, active, amalgamated 1 January 2014, head office address matching the APC award. For AKG Canada, no matching federal or Alberta registration was located for the name as printed on the award, and that is recorded as NOT ESTABLISHED. Read 14 September 2026.

Population and comparison data

2022 Canadian Survey of Disability, Persons with Disabilities in Alberta

Treasury Board and Finance, Government of Alberta, June 2025. Six pages. ISBN 978-1-4601-6345-0. Taken: "In 2022, 27.5% (906,100) of Albertans aged 15 and over had one or more disabilities, which was slightly higher than the national proportion, at 27.0% (8.0 million)"; that Alberta's disability rate rose faster than Canada's between 2017 and 2022; that Alberta had the highest share of persons with disabilities experiencing at least one barrier to accessibility of any province, at 74.0 per cent; the working-age and senior rates; and the disability type breakdown. Read 15 September 2026. open.alberta.ca

Statistics Canada, Canadian Survey on Disability 2022

Released 1 December 2023. Taken: Table 13-10-0374-01 for Alberta prevalence, 27.5 per cent with a confidence interval of 26.8 to 28.2; Table 13-10-0377-01 for employment rates among persons with disabilities aged 25 to 64 by province, giving Saskatchewan 67.0, Quebec 66.7, Alberta 66.4 with a confidence interval of 63.5 to 69.2, British Columbia 65.0 and Canada 61.8. The 2017 survey figure of 22 per cent nationally is recorded as the origin of the "1 in 5" figure. Read 15 September 2026. statcan.gc.ca

Provincial disability benefit rate tables, six jurisdictions

Each read at that government's own published rate table or regulation. Taken: British Columbia, support allowance $983.50 plus maximum shelter $500, effective 1 December 2025; Saskatchewan, Living Income Benefit one adult, $1,289 Tier A and $1,214 Tier B, effective 1 September 2026; Manitoba, income support $598.37 plus shelter $816, in effect since 1 July 2026; Ontario, $1,436 as that government's own printed total, effective 1 July 2026. Alberta's two rates are taken from AR 96/2026 rather than from a rate table. Read 15 September 2026.

Canada Disability Benefit treatment, by jurisdiction

Seven provinces, each confirmed at that province's own source

British Columbia, Employment and Assistance Policy and Procedure Manual rate table, read 15 September 2026.

Saskatchewan, Government of Saskatchewan news release, 20 June 2025. Manitoba, Assistance Regulation M.R. 404/88 R, s.8(1)(b), current consolidation. Ontario, ODSP Policy Directives for Income Support, directive updated 20 May 2026. Quebec, Règlement sur l'aide aux personnes et aux familles, in force 1 April 2026. New Brunswick, Department of Social Development news release, 4 July 2025. Newfoundland and Labrador, Income and Employment Support Regulations, exempt income definition, current consolidation. Taken: in each case, the words that establish the exemption and the instrument and section in which they appear.

Employment and Social Development Canada, Question Period Note

Canada Disability Benefit, prepared for the Minister of Jobs and Families, reference EF_017_20260105, date received 17 November 2025. Published on the Government of Canada open portal. Taken: "Alberta: We are disappointed that the Government of Alberta has decided to claw back the Canada Disability Benefit from their social assistance benefits, including under its Assured Income for the Severely Handicapped (AISH) program"; and the federal position that it has called on provinces and territories to exempt the benefit from counting as income. Alberta is the only jurisdiction named in a treatment context in that note. Read 15 September 2026. search.open.canada.ca

Office of the Auditor General of Alberta

Every publication from 1 January 2024 to 15 September 2026 enumerated, candidates opened, together with the published work-in-progress plan and the business plan to 31 March 2027. Taken: the absence of any publication or planned audit concerning ADAP; the last AISH work being the Systems to Manage the AISH Program assessment of 14 December 2023, before the window opens. Read 15 September 2026.

What was gated, blocked or not checked

This section is part of the record. A source that could not be reached is recorded here rather than left out, so that the shape of the evidence is visible.

What	Status	Why, and what follows from it
The eight documents attached to Alberta Purchasing Connect posting AB-2025-06143, which contain the contract terms, any performance requirements and the definition of the service streams	GATED	Behind a sign-in; the document endpoint returns HTTP 401. Any Alberta survey, registry or provincial estimate of disability prevalence	NONE FOUND	The only Alberta-published prevalence data is a summary of the federal survey, plus open-data tables carrying 2012 figures.
Alberta Purchasing Connect searched by awardee	NOT POSSIBLE	The site offers no search by company. Nothing here supports a claim about the total any company holds.
The ministry's 2025-26 annual report	NOT PUBLISHED	The government index still shows 2024-25 as the most recent set.

Three rules that governed the research

Never quote from a search result. Every quotation in both companion documents was read in the document that prints it.

Never present a calculation as a government figure. Every subtraction or division is tagged ARITHMETIC wherever it appears.

Never fill a gap. Where a source could not be reached, it is listed above rather than estimated, inferred or replaced with a secondary description.

*Nothing in either companion document rests on a secondary source.
