1. Start here — how the system fits together

Alberta law starts from a simple idea: every adult is presumed to have the capacity to make their own decisions, and that presumption holds until the opposite is shown (Adult Guardianship and Trusteeship Act — “AGTA” — s 2(a)). The whole system is built to use the least restrictive and least intrusive form of help that will actually work (AGTA s 2(c)), and every substitute decision must serve the adult’s best interests, guided by what the adult valued and wished for while capable (AGTA s 2(d)).

“Capacity” has a precise meaning: the ability to understand the information relevant to a decision and to appreciate the reasonably foreseeable consequences of making — or not making — that decision (AGTA s 1(d)). How a person communicates is never, by itself, a reason to find they lack capacity (AGTA s 2(b)).

Because capacity can be partial and can change over time, the law offers a spectrum of options rather than a single on/off switch. They run from the lightest touch to the most intrusive, and split into a personal track (health, housing, daily life) and a financial track (money and property):

The spectrum — personal decisions	Supported decision-making (the adult still decides, with help) → Co-decision-making (the adult and a co-decision-maker decide together, by court order) → Specific / one-time decisions (a single health-care or placement decision) → Guardianship (a guardian decides, by court order).
The spectrum — financial decisions	Informal options (benefit-administration programs) → Specific financial decision by the Public Trustee (a single, necessary decision) → Trusteeship (a trustee manages money and property, by court order).
Plan ahead and skip the court	A valid personal directive and enduring power of attorney , made while you are capable, let people you choose step in if capacity is later lost — usually removing any need for a guardianship or trusteeship application at all.

What most people are really asking — and why it is not in this guide

The most common question families ask is simple: how do I get permission to phone or email about my relative's AISH or ADAP file? That does not need guardianship or trusteeship — and, importantly, the lightest AGTA option (supported decision-making, Form 1) covers personal matters only and does not extend to finances or financial information. AISH and ADAP are financial, so Form 1 will not put a family member onto a benefits file.

What you actually need is the program's own written consent authorizing a named person to receive information about your file and to speak to the program on your behalf. This is a departmental consent — not a court order and not an AGTA instrument — so it sits outside this guide, and because it is not an AGTA form this guide gives it no section number. Ask your AISH or ADAP office — the contact printed on your benefit letters — for the form or consent that authorizes a third party on your file. If an old letter's address may be out of date, use the current AISH/ADAP client email for your region (from alberta.ca/contact-aish-and-adap, checked August 2026): northzoneaish@gov.ab.ca (Edmonton and north), aish.centralregion@gov.ab.ca (central, e.g. Red Deer), calgaryaish@gov.ab.ca (Calgary), or southaish@gov.ab.ca (south, e.g. Lethbridge and Medicine Hat).

The heavier financial route — the Public Trustee actually administering benefits (IBAP, section 5.1) — is far more than most families want. For everyday help with a file, start with the consent form, not the court.

Not legal advice

This guide summarizes Alberta legislation in plain language and points to the exact sections so you can check everything yourself. It is not legal advice, and it does not replace the Act, the regulations, or advice from a lawyer. Where this guide and the law differ, the law governs.

Court applications under the AGTA are made to the Court of King's Bench. The Office of the Public Guardian and Trustee (OPGT) reviews applications for completeness before they go to court, but does not give legal advice.

2. Who the OPGT is — two offices, one door

The Office of the Public Guardian and Trustee is really two public offices working under one roof. The distinction matters, because it maps exactly onto the personal/financial split above:

The Public Guardian	Deals with the person — health care, where someone lives, and other personal matters. Acts as a guardian of last resort , can be an agent under a personal directive, can make certain one-time personal decisions, and investigates complaints about personal decision-makers (AGTA s 107; Personal Directives Act s 7.1).
The Public Trustee	Deals with money and property — estates, trusts, the property of minors and of represented adults. Acts as a trustee of last resort , and, since April 2026, can make a single necessary financial decision to support where an adult lives (Public Trustee Act, SA 2004 c P-44.1, s 5; AGTA ss 100.1–100.8).

“Of last resort”

Both step in only when no suitable family member, friend, or private arrangement is available (AGTA ss 26(2), 47). They are the safety net, not the first stop.

The OPGT also trains and rosters the professionals who do capacity assessments, reviews court-application bundles for completeness, keeps the personal-directive agent registry and the international-wills registry, and runs voluntary benefit-administration programs for AISH and CPP-Disability recipients.

3. Capacity assessment — the gateway

Most court orders and several other steps require a formal capacity assessment: a structured evaluation of whether an adult can make a particular kind of decision and appreciate its consequences. It is decision-specific — someone may have capacity for some choices and not others — and it must use the correct prescribed form.

An assessment is carried out by a designated capacity assessor and written up in a capacity assessment report (AGTA ss 102, 1(f)–(g)). The regulation sets who may assess and how:

Who may assess	Physicians and psychologists are automatically designated. Registered nurses, registered psychiatric nurses, occupational therapists and social workers may be designated after completing the required training (AGTA Regulation, AR 219/2009, ss 6–7).
How it’s done	A recent medical evaluation (within about 3 months), an in-person meeting, and an explanation of the adult’s rights; an interpreter or support person is allowed. The adult may refuse to be assessed (Reg ss 3–5).
The forms	Form 3 — co-decision-making; Form 4 — guardianship and/or trusteeship; Form 6 / Form 10 — specific decision-making (Form 10 cites AGTA s 96). Assessors are listed publicly by the OPGT.
Cost	Assessor fees are capped by regulation: up to $500 for a personal-only or financial-only assessment, or $700 for a combined assessment; the court can allow more for a complex case (AGTA Regulation s 9). Section 6 sets out the full cost picture.

4. Personal decisions — from lightest to most intrusive

4.1 Supported decision-making (the adult still decides)

The lightest option. An adult who has capacity chooses a trusted “supporter” to help them get information, understand it, and communicate the decision they make. The adult remains the decision-maker (AGTA ss 3–10).

- Made by signing a Supported Decision-making Authorization — Form 1 (OPG5557); ended with Form 2 (OPG5558).
- One to three supporters, each 18 or older (AGTA s 4).

- Covers personal matters only, not finances, and only lets a supporter access personal (not financial) information (AGTA ss 3, 9).
- The Public Guardian and Public Trustee cannot be supporters (AGTA s 5).
- Ends automatically if the adult later becomes an assisted or represented adult, or a personal directive takes effect (AGTA s 8).

4.2 Co-decision-making (deciding together, by court order)

For an adult whose capacity is significantly impaired but who can still make personal decisions with guidance and support. The court appoints a co-decision-maker to decide jointly with the adult — the adult’s wish prevails unless it would likely cause serious harm (AGTA ss 11–23).

Getting the order	An interested person applies to court with a capacity assessment report (Form 3). The court must be satisfied capacity is significantly impaired but adequate with support, that less-intrusive options were considered, that it is in the adult’s best interests, and that the adult consents (AGTA s 13).
Areas of authority	The order lists the personal areas shared — health care, where and with whom to live, associations, social activities, education or training, employment, and non-financial legal matters (AGTA s 17(2)).
Pay and review	A co-decision-maker is reimbursed expenses only, not paid (AGTA s 19), and the order is reviewed when the court requires it or when a change is needed (AGTA s 21).

4.3 Specific (one-time) decisions — a single health or placement choice

Sometimes an adult has lost capacity for one immediate decision and there is no guardian and no personal-directive agent in place. Rather than force a full guardianship, the law lets a specific decision-maker be selected for that one decision about health care or temporary admission to / discharge from a residential facility (AGTA Part 3, Division 1, ss 87–101).

How the person is chosen	A health-care provider assesses capacity for the decision and selects a specific decision-maker from a ranked list of the adult’s nearest relatives (AGTA ss 87–89; “nearest relative” is defined in s 1(x)).
New in April 2026	If a personal-directive agent is unable or unwilling to act or cannot be found, the Public Guardian may now be selected as the specific decision-maker (AGTA s 88.1, added by SA 2025 c 20).
A check on the decision	The adult, a relative, a legal representative, or someone with a close and substantial relationship can request a capacity assessment ; a resulting report overrides the provider’s assessment (AGTA s 96). A court review is also available (AGTA s 97).
True emergencies	In an emergency, a physician may provide health care without consent to preserve life, prevent serious harm, or relieve severe pain (AGTA s 101).

April 2026 note: the definition of a “residential facility” was widened — the old minimum of four residents was removed and facility accreditation added — which opens up more placement options under specific decision-making.

4.4 Guardianship (a guardian decides, by court order)

The most intrusive personal option, for an adult who does not have capacity to make personal decisions and where lighter options will not work. A guardian is appointed by the court and may be given authority over some or all personal matters (AGTA ss 24–42).

Getting the order	An interested person applies with a capacity assessment report (Form 4) and a guardianship plan (Form 32). The court must find no capacity, that less-intrusive alternatives are inadequate, and that the order is in the adult’s best interests (AGTA s 26). Where no one suitable is available, the Public Guardian must apply — guardian of last resort (AGTA s 26(2)).
Areas of authority	The order specifies the powers granted, chosen from: (a) health care; (b) where, with whom and on what conditions the adult lives; (c) who they associate with; (d) social activities; (e) education, vocational or other training; (f) employment; (g) non-financial legal matters; (h) any other personal matter (AGTA s 33(2)).
Duties	Act in the adult’s best interests, involve the adult, and use the least-intrusive approach (AGTA s 35). A guardian keeps an annual Record of Decisions (Form 33).
Urgent orders	In immediate danger of death or serious harm, the court can make an urgent guardianship order. The court sets a review date no later than 90 days out; the order expires on that date unless the court, on review, extends it once for up to six months (AGTA s 27(4)–(5)).
Review	Guardianship orders are reviewed as the court requires or when circumstances change (AGTA s 40).
A hard limit	A guardianship order is not proof that the adult cannot make a will, and a guardian has no power to make a will for the adult (AGTA s 85).

5. Financial decisions — from lightest to most intrusive

5.1 Informal options (no court order)

- Informal Benefits Administration Program (IBAP): a voluntary way for the Public Trustee to help manage AISH and CPP-Disability benefits for someone who needs a hand — no court order required.
- Informal trusteeship arrangements offered by some benefit programs.
- These are outside the OPGT’s complaint jurisdiction — the OPGT cannot investigate an informal trustee or an attorney under a power of attorney (see section 8).

5.2 Specific financial decision by the Public Trustee (new — April 2026)

A genuinely new, narrow power. Where an adult has lost capacity, no other financial decision-maker is in place, and a financial decision is necessary to support a decision about where the adult will live, the Public Trustee can now make that single decision (AGTA Division 1.1, ss 100.1–100.8, added by SA 2025 c 20).

How narrow is it?

It is limited to a financial decision that supports a placement decision — for example, releasing funds so a move to a care setting can happen. The authority ends once the decision is carried out (AGTA s 100.3), and it only applies when no trustee, attorney, or other decision-maker exists.

Started by a “Referral for the Public Trustee to Make a Specific Financial Decision.” The adult’s financial capacity is assessed first (AGTA s 100.2), a record is kept (s 100.4), and a review is available (s 100.5).

5.3 Trusteeship (a trustee manages money and property, by court order)

The full financial counterpart to guardianship, for an adult without capacity to manage their finances. A trustee is appointed to handle income, bills, assets and property (AGTA ss 43–72).

Getting the order	Apply with a capacity assessment report (Form 4) and a trusteeship plan (Form 34), plus an inventory of the adult’s property (Form 37). Where no one suitable is available, the Public Trustee is the trustee of last resort and must inquire into the need (AGTA ss 46–47).
Powers and property	The order lists which property the trustee controls and what they may do with it (AGTA s 55). Some duties otherwise under the Trustee Act are displaced (s 44).
Duties and standard	Act in the adult’s best interests, spend for the adult’s support, keep the adult’s property separate , and meet the standard of a reasonably prudent person (AGTA ss 56–57, 62). Investments follow specified rules (s 59); gifts and dealing with the adult’s will are tightly limited (ss 60–61).
Accounts	A trustee must keep accounts and may be required to have them examined and approved by the court (AGTA s 63; Forms 36–38). Compensation follows a prescribed fee schedule (s 66; Reg Schedule 1).
Urgent / review	An urgent trusteeship order works the same way as an urgent guardianship order: a court-set review date no later than 90 days, expiring then unless extended once for up to six months (AGTA s 48(6)–(7)). Ordinary orders are reviewed as required (s 70).

6. What it costs, how long it takes, and starting early

These are the practical facts that decide whether a family starts a guardianship or trusteeship application or puts it off. The figures below are from the Government of Alberta and the OPGT; confirm current amounts with the OPGT before you rely on them.

Court filing fee	Up to $300 to file the initial application with the Court of King’s Bench; a later review of an existing order is a lower $100 filing fee (Government of Alberta). Either is separate from, and on top of, the capacity-assessment cost.
Capacity assessment	Capped at $500 for a personal-only or financial-only assessment, or $700 for a combined assessment; the court can allow more for a complex case (AGTA Regulation s 9).
Background checks	The proposed guardian or trustee must complete a criminal record check and reference checks — and a credit check as well for a trustee — through the OPGT’s process.
If cost is a hardship	If these costs are a hardship for the applicant and the adult, you can apply to have some of them covered by the Government of Alberta — ask the OPGT.
How long	About 6 months in total — that is the OPGT’s own figure, from when your paperwork is ready to submit until the court decides; it can be longer. (Your filing cheque is not cashed until the application actually reaches the court, which can be near the end of that period — so expect the fee to be drawn months after you hand it in.)
Start early — about 17½	For a young person who will need a decision-maker as an adult, you can apply in the 12 months before their 18th birthday ; the court can grant the order, but it does not take effect until they turn 18 (AGTA ss 24(1)–(2), 43) — so it is in place with no gap. Families commonly start at about 17½.

Two figures families mention — checked against the source

Some families put the court cost at “around $300,” and that is right: the court filing fee is up to $300 (Government of Alberta). The capacity assessment (up to $500, or $700 combined) and the background checks are on top of that. The “about six months” families describe is right too — it is the OPGT’s own typical timeline.

Some describe an “emergency route” of 30–60 days. The Act’s emergency tools are different, and these are the sourced figures: an urgent guardianship or trusteeship order is reviewed on a court-set date no later than 90 days and expires then unless extended once for up to six months (AGTA ss 27, 48); a Public Guardian temporary protection order expires after 30 days (AGTA s 74). Rely on those, not a 30–60 day figure. And an urgent order is a bridge, not a shortcut: a temporary guardian’s authority lasts up to 90 days, and if guardianship is still needed when it expires, a full initial application is required (Government of Alberta).

7. Plan ahead — and usually avoid court entirely

Everything above is the safety net for when nothing was arranged in advance. The far better path, for any Albertan 18 or older, is to sign three documents while you still have capacity. Together they let people you choose act for you, privately, with no court application:

Personal directive → replaces a guardian	A written document naming an agent to make your personal decisions (health care, housing, daily life) if you lose capacity. Made by anyone 18+ who understands it (Personal Directives Act, RSA 2000 c P-6, ss 3, 7). It takes effect only when you lack capacity , shown by a written declaration — by the person you named, or otherwise by two service providers, at least one a physician or psychologist (s 9). Some choices (e.g., psychosurgery, non-therapeutic sterilization) need express instructions (s 15). You can name the Public Guardian as agent of last resort (s 7.1).
Enduring power of attorney → replaces a trustee	A written document naming an attorney to manage your finances . Unlike an ordinary power of attorney, it survives incapacity (Powers of Attorney Act, RSA 2000 c P-20, ss 2, 4). It can be immediate or “springing” — taking effect only on incapacity, which two medical practitioners can declare (s 5). The attorney has a real duty to act in your interests (s 8). It ends if a trusteeship order is later granted (s 13).
A will → directs your estate	A valid will (Wills and Succession Act, SA 2010 c W-12.2, ss 13–17) says where your property goes after death. Without one, intestacy rules decide (ss 58–67). If a share would pass to a minor or an incapacitated adult, that is a classic trigger for Public Trustee involvement — another reason to plan.

Why planning beats the court

A personal directive and an enduring power of attorney are private, cheaper, faster, and keep your chosen people in charge. Guardianship and trusteeship are what the law falls back on when that planning is missing — which is exactly why the OPGT urges every adult to complete all three documents.

The OPGT keeps a registry of personal-directive agents’ contact information and a registry for international wills, and offers free plain-language forms and guides for all three.

8. When something goes wrong — complaints and protection

If a decision-maker is putting an adult at immediate risk, call 911. Short of that, the OPGT provides oversight and can investigate.

Who you can complain about	A co-decision-maker, guardian, or trustee (AGTA ss 75–76), or an agent under an enacted personal directive (Personal Directives Act s 24.2). The OPGT cannot investigate an attorney under a power of attorney, or an informal trustee.
The test to investigate	The OPGT may investigate where the decision-maker is not following the order or directive or not meeting their duties, and is likely to harm the adult physically, mentally, or financially (by act or inaction).
How to complain	Form 5 — Complaint Respecting a Co-decision-maker, Guardian or Trustee (OPG5561); or Schedule 7 — Personal Directives complaint to the Public Guardian (OPG5527). Complaints cannot be anonymous.

Emergency protection	The Public Guardian can obtain a temporary protection order where an adult is at risk of serious harm; it expires after 30 days (AGTA s 74). After investigating, an investigator has powers to act and to notify authorities (AGTA ss 77–79).
If you disagree with the OPGT	A complaint about the OPGT’s own handling can go to the Alberta Ombudsman (1-888-455-2756).

9. Notices, reviews and appeals

9.1 If you receive a decision-maker notice

When someone applies to be a guardian, trustee, or co-decision-maker, close family and friends are notified by mail. You can support the application by doing nothing, or oppose it by responding.

Notice of Application	No hearing is scheduled yet. To oppose, you must request a hearing by the deadline — Form 31, Request for Hearing (OPG5596) — sent to the OPGT review officer named in your letter.
Notice of Application and Hearing	A hearing is already scheduled. To oppose, you (or your lawyer) must attend the hearing and voice your concerns.

9.2 Reviews and appeals

- Co-decision-making, guardianship and trusteeship orders are reviewed as the court requires or when circumstances change (AGTA ss 21, 40, 70).
- New in April 2026: an interested person can start a review of a co-decision-making, guardianship or trusteeship order as a desk application — on the papers — instead of having to begin a full hearing process (reflecting AGTA s 111).
- A decision of the Court of King’s Bench can be appealed to the Court of Appeal on a question of law (AGTA s 114).
- Breaching duties as a supporter, co-decision-maker, guardian or trustee is an offence under AGTA s 86.

10. The Public Trustee’s wider role

Beyond acting as a trustee of last resort under the AGTA, the Public Trustee has its own statute (Public Trustee Act, SA 2004 c P-44.1) covering money and property in several other situations:

Estates and trusts	Can act as the personal representative of a deceased person, as trustee of a trust, or in other fiduciary roles (s 5).
Minors’ property	Protects the property of minors and unborn persons; must be notified when a minor has an interest in money or property and the law requires it; can transfer smaller amounts to a guardian (ss 17–18).

Represented adults	When acting as trustee of an incapacitated adult's estate, that property vests in the Public Trustee (s 24).
Unclaimed deceased — burial (new)	Since April 2026, the Public Trustee may handle the burial of an unclaimed deceased person — searching for family, gathering the estate's financial information, and giving burial and payment instructions (ss 5(c.1), 13.1).
Court-appointment safeguard (new)	A court may direct the Public Trustee to act only after 15 days' notice of the application, and only with the Public Trustee's consent (s 6).
Unclaimed funds	Long-unclaimed money can be transferred to the General Revenue Fund — with the holding period now shortened — and people can still claim it afterward.

11. What changed on April 1, 2026

All of the following took effect April 1, 2026 under the Financial Statutes Amendment Act, 2025 (No. 2) (SA 2025 c 20), which amended both the AGTA and the Public Trustee Act:

Adult Guardianship and Trusteeship Act

Wider “residential facility” definition — the four-resident minimum was removed and accreditation added, giving more placement options under specific decision-making.

New specific financial decision power — the Public Trustee can make a single necessary financial decision to support where an adult will live, when no other decision-maker is in place (new AGTA ss 100.1–100.8).

Public Guardian as specific decision-maker — available when a personal-directive agent is unable or unwilling to act, subject to conditions (AGTA s 88.1).

Desk-application reviews — reviews of co-decision-making, guardianship and trusteeship orders can proceed on the papers instead of requiring a full hearing.

Public Trustee Act

15 days' notice required before a court appoints the Public Trustee to act (s 6).

Burial of an unclaimed deceased person — a new Public Trustee function, including searching for family and directing payment of burial costs (ss 5(c.1), 13.1).

Shorter holding period for unclaimed funds before transfer to the General Revenue Fund — still claimable afterward.

One Act, two systems — a connection worth noting

The same statute made both sets of changes. Section 6 of the Financial Statutes Amendment Act, 2025 (No. 2) rewrote the AISH Act and produced the July 2, 2026 transition of AISH recipients to the new Alberta Disability Assistance Program; sections 1 and 12 of the same Act rewrote the guardianship and Public Trustee frameworks in this guide, in force April 1, 2026 (Alberta King’s Printer, Proclamations). The Act that moved tens of thousands of disabled Albertans onto ADAP also reshaped how decisions can be made for adults who lose capacity.

12. Key forms, by pathway

The OPGT’s forms all carry an “OPG” number and are free at cfr.forms.gov.ab.ca. The most-used ones:
