

DO YOU KNOW YOUR NEW MINISTER?

A DOCUMENTED PUBLIC RECORD OF NATHAN NEUDORF

SWORN IN MAY 21, 2026 · RESPONSIBLE FOR 79,290 ALBERTANS · 41 DAYS UNTIL ADAP

This document is a record of the Minister's public conduct.

Every item in this document is sourced from regulator decisions, CBC News reporting, investigative journalism by The Narwhal, Lethbridge Herald reporting, Elections Alberta records, the Alberta Legislature, Government of Alberta mandate letters, and verified independent journalism. Where the Minister has issued a public response, that response appears in his own words. This is not opinion. This is the public record.

WHO IS NATHAN NEUDORF?

Full name	Nathan Neudorf ECA MLA
Current title	Minister of Assisted Living and Social Services (sworn in May 21, 2026)
Riding	Lethbridge-East (elected April 16, 2019; re-elected May 29, 2023)
Party	United Conservative Party
Previous portfolios	Deputy Premier of Alberta (Oct 2022 – June 2023) Minister of Infrastructure (Oct 2022 – June 2023) Minister of Affordability and Utilities and Vice Chair of Treasury Board (June 2023 – May 2026) Chair, UCP Caucus Chair, Standing Committee on Alberta's Economic Future
Pre-political career	Approximately 30 years in commercial and residential construction. Red seal journeyman carpenter and gold seal project manager. Civil and structural engineering diploma, BCIT, 1994. Manager, Special Projects, Ward Bros. Construction Ltd. (2016–2018); Project Manager, Ward Bros. (2011–2018). Past President, Lethbridge Construction Association. Former board member: Alberta Construction Association, Alberta Construction Safety Association, Workers Compensation Board.
Family	Wife Deanne. Five children. Lethbridge.

A NOTE ON THE PUBLIC BIOGRAPHY

The biographical material in the table above is drawn from official sources — the United Conservative Party of Alberta, the Government of Alberta ministerial pages, the United Conservative Caucus, the Council of State Governments West, and the Minister's own 2019 and 2023 candidate interviews with Lethbridge News Now. Each of these sources describes the Minister's pre-political career as “nearly 30 years in the commercial and residential construction industry” as a “Red Seal journeyman carpenter, Gold Seal project manager, and business owner.”

In a 2023 candidate interview with Lethbridge News Now, the Minister stated: “I’ve come through small business ownership, primarily in construction.”

The small business referenced is not named in any official biographical source reviewed for this document. The Minister's first publicly named employer in the documented record is Ward Bros. Construction Ltd. of Lethbridge, where biographical aggregator profiles list him as Project Manager (2011–2018) and Manager, Special Projects (2016–2018). His Civil and Structural Engineering diploma from BCIT was earned in 1994.

The seventeen-year period between his 1994 diploma and his first publicly named employer in 2011 is not detailed in any official biographical source. The name of his small business, the projects he managed, the employers he worked for, and the jurisdictions in which he operated during that period are not part of his publicly available career record.

This is a record-keeping observation. It is included in this file because biographical opacity in the publicly available career history of an elected official — particularly one whose new portfolio governs the lives of 79,290 Albertans — is itself part of the documented public record. The campaign does not speculate on what the unaccounted-for years involved. The question of what the Minister was professionally engaged in during that seventeen-year span is left open for journalists, researchers, and members of the public with access to Alberta and British Columbia corporate registry records.

Source: United Conservative Party of Alberta, MLA biography. Government of Alberta, Minister of Affordability and Utilities and Minister of Assisted Living and Social Services biographical pages. United Conservative Caucus MLA page. Lethbridge News Now, May 2, 2023, candidate interview. Lethbridge News Now, April 16, 2019, election night interview. RocketReach professional record listing.

INCIDENT 1 — THE AESO RENEWABLES PAUSE — AUGUST 2023

What happened:

On August 3, 2023, the Government of Alberta announced an immediate seven-month moratorium on approvals of all wind and solar power projects greater than one megawatt. The Premier and the Minister of Affordability and Utilities, Nathan Neudorf, publicly attributed the pause to a request from the Alberta Electric System Operator (AESO) and its independent board chair Karl Johansson.

What the documented record establishes:

Internal correspondence and AESO records subsequently obtained by The Narwhal contradicted the public attribution. The records showed the pause was government-directed, and that AESO's then-chief executive officer Mike Law was "not comfortable" with the plan. The internal documents indicated Minister Neudorf had asked Johansson for a letter of support for the moratorium, and that Law warned the moratorium would deter investors and send the renewable energy industry into a "tailspin."

What Neudorf said:

Minister Neudorf stood in the Legislature and described the moratorium as having been suggested by an independent board chair. When The Narwhal subsequently revealed internal communications calling that account into question, the Minister's office did not respond to a list of questions submitted by the publication.

Source: The Narwhal, May 15, 2024, "Alberta claims renewables pause wasn't political. Emails, texts say otherwise." The Narwhal, November 14, 2024, "Past TC Energy VPs backed Alberta renewables pause." CBC News, August 23, 2023, "Alberta electricity regulator opts for least stringent application of renewable energy pause."

INCIDENT 2 — THE PEMBINA REPORT DISMISSALS — 2023–2024

What happened:

Following the announcement of the renewables moratorium, the Pembina Institute published a series of analyses quantifying its impact. The August 2023 analysis documented $33 billion in affected investment across 118 projects and 24,000 job-years. A follow-up analysis in August 2024 documented 53 cancelled projects, more than 8,600 megawatts of lost generation capacity (enough to power every home in Alberta), and approximately $91 million per year in lost municipal tax revenue for rural Alberta municipalities.

What Neudorf said:

Minister Neudorf publicly dismissed the Pembina Institute's analyses. He described the August 2023 analysis as "misleading." On the 2024 follow-up report, the Minister stated that the institute's report "intentionally misconstrues the facts" and that it "puts ideology before common sense." In a separate statement, he characterized the analysis as "misinformation."

What is not in dispute:

The Pembina Institute's figures were sourced from public records and notices to the Alberta Electric System Operator. The capacity figure (8,600 MW) was independently reported by The Canadian Press. The Minister did not at any point publish alternative figures from the Government of Alberta to refute the analysis the Pembina Institute had presented.

Source: Global News, August 25, 2023, "Alberta renewable energy development pause affects $33B in investment, 24,000 job-years: report." The Energy Mix, August 9, 2024, "Alberta Moratorium Costs Communities $91M in Tax Revenue, Cancels 53 Renewables Projects." Corporate Knights, August 13, 2024, citing The Canadian Press.

INCIDENT 3 — THE 40% LAND RESTRICTION — 2024–2025

What happened:

Following the lifting of the formal moratorium, the Government of Alberta announced an expansion of restrictions on where renewable energy projects could be located. The new rules limit development on Alberta's native grassland and on irrigated and irrigable agricultural land, and impose viewscape limitations affecting development near "pristine" viewscape. Independent analysis reported that the cumulative restrictions could prohibit renewable energy development on up to approximately 40 percent of Alberta's land area, with the viewscape limitation alone covering approximately 23 percent.

What Neudorf's office said:

Minister Neudorf's press secretary Ashley Stevenson stated: "These new rules ensure responsible land use, protecting the environment, Albertans' property rights, Alberta's beautiful landscapes, and the best agricultural industry in the world." She added: "Our government is focused on putting Albertans first, not industrial power projects."

What was subsequently confirmed:

In April 2026, officials at the Alberta Utilities Commission confirmed publicly that they had been working on standardized setback rules for renewable energy infrastructure for two years under mandates issued by Minister Neudorf. Kim Macnab, executive director at the AUC, stated: "In 2024, in addition to other policy changes related to agricultural land, visual impacts, reclamation, security, the minister of affordability and utilities [Neudorf] requested the AUC to pursue standardized setbacks for renewable energy infrastructure in the province."

Source: OilPrice.com, October 19, 2024, "Alberta Under Fire From Environmentalists for Restrictions on Renewable Energy." Canada's National Observer, April 29, 2026, "Alberta fires latest salvos in 'war' on renewable energy." DeSmog, September 4, 2025, "Understanding Alberta's Expensive, Ideological War on Renewable Energy."

INCIDENT 4 — THE RECALL PETITION — NOVEMBER 2025–FEBRUARY 2026

What happened:

On November 25, 2025, Alberta's Chief Electoral Officer Gordon McClure approved a recall petition application against Lethbridge-East MLA Nathan Neudorf. The application was filed by constituent Ryan Tanner. To trigger a recall election, the petition required 13,207 valid signatures from Lethbridge-East voters between November 26, 2025 and February 23, 2026 (representing 60% of the votes cast in the riding in the 2023 general election). In his application, Tanner wrote that Neudorf's recent votes "demonstrate a disconnect and his inability to meet the needs, desires and expectations" of constituents.

What was documented by Lethbridge Herald and CBC News:

Multiple news outlets, including the Lethbridge Herald (December 13, 2025) and CBC News (December 9, 2025), documented that the approved recall campaign appeared to be non-functional. The recall petition had no visible online presence. Multiple residents who volunteered to canvass — including Lucretia Apperloo, Barb Phillips, and teacher Jeff Milner — reported being either ignored or given non-substantive responses by the recall organizer. CBC News reported that under Alberta's Recall Act, if a petition drive to recall an MLA is not successful, no other recall bid may be initiated against that MLA during the term. The deadline of February 23, 2026 passed without the required signatures being gathered.

What Neudorf said:

In a written response to Elections Alberta on November 18, 2025, Neudorf stated: "I respect the democratic process and the right of constituents to hold elected officials accountable. However, recall legislation was designed for cases of serious misconduct, not policy disagreements. I have consistently worked to represent Lethbridge-East with integrity, listening to diverse perspectives and making decisions in the best interest of our community and province. Weaponizing recall for ideological purposes undermines stability and constructive governance." When questioned by reporters in December 2025 about why the recall against him appeared to be inactive, Neudorf said: "I'm not actively involved in my own recall."

Source: Elections Alberta, Recall Petition No. 71 — Member Response Email, November 18, 2025. CBC News, December 9, 2025, "Lethbridge MLA's recall campaign doing no visible campaigning, spurning volunteers." Lethbridge Herald, December 13, 2025, "Neudorf recall mystery deepens." Lethbridge News Now, November 26, 2025; December 12, 2025.

INCIDENT 5 — THE ADAP OP-ED — MAY 9, 2026

What happened:

On May 9, 2026 — twelve days before being sworn in as Minister of Assisted Living and Social Services — Nathan Neudorf published an op-ed in the Lethbridge Herald titled “Understanding AISH and ADAP: What Lethbridge residents should know.” The op-ed thanked then-Minister Jason Nixon for information provided to the City of Lethbridge, described ADAP as the outcome of “extensive engagement with Albertans with disabilities, their families, service providers, medical professionals, and advocacy organizations,” and stated that Alberta had committed $3.7 billion in Budget 2026 to disability supports, representing a 40 percent increase since 2019.

What the documented record establishes:

The op-ed’s characterization of the public engagement on ADAP did not match the documented record. The Government of Alberta’s own ADAP engagement page was closed to public submissions in early 2025, before the program structure was finalized. Multiple disability advocacy organizations — including Inclusion Alberta, Voice of Albertans with Disabilities, and the People’s Alliance for Disabled Albertans — publicly stated during the engagement period that the consultation framework did not meaningfully include disabled Albertans in program design. The $3.7 billion figure cited covers all ministry programs, not the AISH benefit reduction or the ADAP structural changes specifically. The May 12, 2026 ADAP Fact Sheet (published three days after the op-ed) confirmed a base benefit reduction of $200 per month and an earnings exemption reduction of $372 per month for single recipients, a structural decrease of $572 per month from current AISH parameters.

Public response:

The op-ed was rebutted in detail, with line-by-line sourced counter-citations, in formal correspondence submitted to MLA Neudorf’s constituency office on May 17, 2026 by The Alberta Disability System Breakdown. The correspondence has been preserved in the campaign record alongside its source documents. The Minister’s office did not respond.

*Source: Lethbridge Herald, May 9, 2026, “Understanding AISH and ADAP: What Lethbridge residents should know.”
Government of Alberta ADAP Fact Sheet, May 12, 2026. The Alberta Disability System Breakdown, formal rebuttal correspondence, May 17, 2026.*

WHAT THIS RECORD ESTABLISHES

Nathan Neudorf inherits the ADAP file at a moment of unusual stakes: 41 days before mandatory transition, with regulations published only on May 12, 2026 and substantial portions of the clawback schedule still not in operational form. He inherits it from Jason Nixon, who was moved to Treasury and Finance the same day.

The documented record on the new Minister, drawn from the sources above, establishes the following patterns that are relevant to the 79,290 Albertans whose lives will be governed by decisions made in his ministry:

- A pattern of attributing significant decisions to other parties. The renewables pause was attributed to AESO's independent board chair until internal correspondence contradicted that attribution. The lack of activity on his own recall petition was attributed to circumstance, with the Minister stating he was "not actively involved."
- A pattern of dismissing sourced critical analysis as ideology. The Pembina Institute's reports — each one sourced from public records — were variously characterized by the Minister as "misinformation," as "intentionally misconstruing the facts," and as putting "ideology before common sense." The Minister did not at any point publish alternative analysis from the Government of Alberta to refute the figures presented.
- A pattern of public characterization of consultation that does not match the documented engagement record. The May 9, 2026 op-ed described ADAP as the outcome of extensive engagement with the disability community. The engagement record — documented by Inclusion Alberta, Voice of Albertans with Disabilities, and multiple other organizations — does not support that characterization.
- A constituency office accessibility concern, on the public record. A letter to the editor published in the Lethbridge Herald on May 21, 2026 — the same day Neudorf was sworn in as Minister of Assisted Living and Social Services — documented a constituent's inability to reach the Minister's office after twenty-seven documented contact attempts.

THE RECORD ESTABLISHES WHAT IT ESTABLISHES.

Minister Neudorf was sworn in on May 21, 2026. The mandatory AISH-to-ADAP transition takes effect on July 1, 2026. The new Minister has 41 days to demonstrate a different pattern. The campaign welcomes that demonstration in writing.

SOURCES CITED IN THIS DOCUMENT

Government and regulator records:

Government of Alberta. "Minister of Assisted Living and Social Services." alberta.ca, accessed May 22, 2026.

Government of Alberta. "Alberta Disability Assistance Program Fact Sheet." alberta.ca, May 12, 2026.

Government of Alberta. "Mandate Letter — Minister of Affordability and Utilities." Office of the Premier, October 16, 2025.

Elections Alberta. "Recall Petition No. 71 — Nathan Neudorf — Member Response Email." November 18, 2025.

Investigative journalism:

Yourex-West, Drew. "Alberta claims renewables pause wasn't political. Emails, texts say otherwise." The Narwhal, May 15, 2024.

Yourex-West, Drew. "Past TC Energy VPs backed Alberta renewables pause." The Narwhal, November 14, 2024.

Noad, Alexandra. "Neudorf recall mystery deepens." Lethbridge Herald, December 13, 2025.

Noad, Alexandra. "Recall law being used exactly as UCP wrote it, says expert." Lethbridge Herald, December 30, 2025.

CBC News and broadcast:

Markusoff, Jason. "Lethbridge MLA's recall campaign doing no visible campaigning, spurning volunteers." CBC News, December 9, 2025.

Markusoff, Jason. "Nixon goes to finance, LaGrange swaps health roles in Alberta cabinet shuffle." CBC News, May 21, 2026.

CBC News. "Affordability and utilities minister tasked to review Alberta's electricity system and pricing." July 20, 2023.

Dryden, Joel. "Lower electricity prices appear on the way for Albertans — no matter what reforms win out." CBC News, December 15, 2023.

CBC News. "Alberta electricity regulator opts for least stringent application of renewable energy pause." August 23, 2023.

Wire services and analysis:

Global News. "Alberta renewable energy development pause affects $33B in investment, 24,000 'job-years': report." August 25, 2023.

Global News. "Alberta Premier Danielle Smith shuffles cabinet following 2 resignations." May 21, 2026.

The Energy Mix. "Alberta Moratorium Costs Communities $91M in Tax Revenue, Cancels 53 Renewables Projects." August 9, 2024.

Corporate Knights. "Renewable projects cancelled could power most of Alberta's homes." August 13, 2024 (citing The Canadian Press).

OilPrice.com. "Alberta Under Fire From Environmentalists for Restrictions on Renewable Energy." October 19, 2024.

Linnitt, Carol. "Alberta fires latest salvos in 'war' on renewable energy." Canada's National Observer, April 29, 2026.

DeSmog. "Understanding Alberta's Expensive, Ideological War on Renewable Energy." September 4, 2025.

Heppner, Kelvin. "Smith taps Tara Sawyer as Alberta's new ag minister." RealAgriculture, May 22, 2026.

Primary subject statements:

Neudorf, Nathan. "Understanding AISH and ADAP: What Lethbridge residents should know." Lethbridge Herald, May 9, 2026.

Neudorf, Nathan. "A season of gratitude, progress and hope." Lethbridge Herald, December 13, 2025.

Lethbridge News Now. "Nathan Neudorf: UCP candidate for Lethbridge-East." Candidate questionnaire interview, May 2, 2023.

Lethbridge News Now. "Neudorf takes Lethbridge-East to become MLA-elect." Election night interview, April 16, 2019.

Biographical sources:

United Conservative Party of Alberta. "Nathan Neudorf — MLA Lethbridge-East." unitedconservative.ca.

United Conservative Caucus. "Nathan Neudorf MLA Profile." unitedconservativecaucus.ca.

Council of State Governments West. "Nathan Neudorf." csgwest.org, June 22, 2021.

RocketReach. "Nathan Neudorf Email & Phone Number — Government of Alberta." Aggregated professional record.

Companion documentation:

The Alberta Disability System Breakdown. "Income Crossover Analysis — Revised May 2026." May 2026.

The Alberta Disability System Breakdown. "AISH Evidentiary Report Series 2026 — Document 9 Supplementary: Do You Know Your Minister? Jason Nixon Background File." April 2026.

The Alberta Disability System Breakdown. Formal rebuttal correspondence to the Honourable Nathan Neudorf, May 17, 2026.

This document is part of the AISH Evidentiary Report Series. It is the companion to the Jason Nixon Background File previously released in April 2026. It will be updated as the documented public record continues to develop.

Free to share. Free to print. Free to post. The record is being kept.