

DO YOU KNOW YOUR MINISTER?

A DOCUMENTED PUBLIC RECORD OF JASON NIXON

PROMOTED TO FINANCE MAY 21, 2026 · 41 DAYS BEFORE THE ADAP TRANSITION HE DESIGNED

This document is a record of the Minister's public conduct. Every item in this document is sourced from court records, tribunal decisions, Government of Alberta records, the Alberta Legislature Hansard, CBC News reporting, the Calgary Herald, the Lethbridge Herald, investigative journalism, and verified independent sources. Where allegations have not been proven in court, they are stated as allegations. Where findings have been made by official bodies, they are stated as findings. Where the Minister has issued a public response, that response appears in his own words. This is not opinion. This is the public record.

WHO IS JASON NIXON?

Full name	Jason John Nixon ECA MLA
Date of birth	May 26, 1980 — Calgary, Alberta
Current title	President of Treasury Board and Minister of Finance (sworn in May 21, 2026)
Riding	Rimbey–Rocky Mountain House–Sundre (elected 2015; re-elected 2019, 2023)
Party	United Conservative Party (formerly Wildrose)
Previous portfolios	Minister of Assisted Living and Social Services (May 16, 2025 – May 21, 2026); Minister of Seniors, Community and Social Services (2023–2025); Minister of Environment and Parks (2019–2022); Minister of Finance (acting); Government House Leader; Leader of the Official Opposition (Wildrose, 2017)
Pre-political role	Executive Director, The Mustard Seed, 2006–2011
Family	Father: Pat Nixon, founder and 26-year chief executive of The Mustard Seed (Calgary homeless shelter and disability/poverty supports), Order of Canada recipient. Brother: Jeremy Nixon, former Mustard Seed staff and Minister of Seniors, Community and Social Services (2022–2023), the AISH portfolio immediately preceding Jason Nixon's.

A NOTE ON THE CABINET SHUFFLE

On May 21, 2026, Premier Danielle Smith announced a cabinet shuffle following the resignations of then-Finance Minister Nate Horner and then-Minister Matt Jones, both of whom announced they would not seek re-election in 2027. On the same day:

- Jason Nixon was promoted from Minister of Assisted Living and Social Services to President of Treasury Board and Minister of Finance.
- Nathan Neudorf was moved from Minister of Affordability and Utilities to Minister of Assisted Living and Social Services, inheriting the AISH-to-ADAP file.
- The mandatory AISH-to-ADAP transition was scheduled to take effect July 1, 2026 — forty-one days later.

The Minister did not leave the AISH-to-ADAP file. He was promoted into control of the budget that funds it. As Minister of Finance and President of Treasury Board, he is now responsible for the fiscal parameters governing the program he designed during his tenure as Minister of Assisted Living and Social Services. The succession is documented in the Government of Alberta's May 21, 2026 cabinet swearing-in record and in CBC News's reporting that same day.

This document records the public conduct of the new Finance Minister during his prior ministerial tenures and pre-political career. It is the companion to the Do You Know Your New Minister? A Documented Public Record of Nathan Neudorf, also released May 2026. Together, the two documents establish the public record of the two officials directly responsible for the policy and budget of the AISH-to-ADAP transition.

Source: Government of Alberta, "Premier and Cabinet," alberta.ca, accessed May 22, 2026. CBC News, May 21, 2026, "Nixon goes to finance, LaGrange swaps health roles in Alberta cabinet shuffle." Global News, May 21, 2026, "Alberta Premier Danielle Smith shuffles cabinet following 2 resignations."

INCIDENT 1 — THE AISH-TO-ADAP ARCHITECTURE — MAY 2025 TO MAY 2026

What happened:

Jason Nixon was sworn in as Minister of Assisted Living and Social Services on May 16, 2025. He served in that role until May 21, 2026 — a tenure of approximately twelve months. During this period, the foundational architecture of the Alberta Disability Assistance Program (ADAP) was designed, the mandatory AISH-to-ADAP transition was scheduled for July 1, 2026, and a series of structural changes to disability income supports were implemented.

What the documented record establishes:

The following policy actions were implemented during Minister Nixon's tenure as Minister of Assisted Living and Social Services, affecting the 79,290 Albertans approved for AISH (Government of Alberta Open Data, September 2025):

- The CDB clawback (July 2025): The Government of Alberta began deducting the $200/month federal Canada Disability Benefit dollar-for-dollar from AISH recipients. Alberta is the only province in Canada to do so. Approximately $190 million per year of federal funding intended to reduce disability poverty is captured by the province and applied to general revenue.
- The $49 million AISH budget cut (2025–26): While the Heritage Fund grew $383 million in a single quarter (Q3 2025–26), the Minister's portfolio cut $49 million from AISH and spent $22 million administering the cut. Net saving: $27 million.
- The community housing rent increase (October 2025): By ministerial order, community housing rents were increased 63 percent — a $221/month increase for AISH recipients in subsidized housing, against a $1,940/month base benefit.
- Bill 12 (December 9, 2025): Passed under Minister Nixon's portfolio, Bill 12 eliminated the independent Citizens Appeal Panel for AISH and ADAP eligibility decisions and replaced it with a new Medical Review Panel whose decisions are final, with no right of appeal.
- The April 3, 2026 letter to Genevieve Bissonette: In formal correspondence responding to constituent advocacy, the Minister advised that AISH recipients moved to ADAP could reapply for AISH "if their medical condition progresses to the point that they are unable to work." This sentence was addressed to a population already formally found by the Government of Alberta to be unable to work. The letter has been preserved in the campaign evidentiary record.
- The May 12, 2026 ADAP Fact Sheet: Published six weeks before the mandatory transition, the fact sheet introduced the 88% cohabitation rule that produces documented household losses approaching $14,611 per year per dual-recipient couple. The complete ADAP earnings clawback rate schedule was referenced verbally but not published in operational form. Full operational regulations had not been published in complete form as of the date of this document.

What Nixon said:

Throughout his tenure, Minister Nixon characterized ADAP as the product of "extensive engagement with Albertans with disabilities, their families, service providers, medical professionals, and advocacy organizations." Multiple disability advocacy organizations — including Inclusion Alberta, Voice of Albertans with Disabilities, and the People's Alliance for Disabled Albertans — publicly stated during the engagement period that the consultation framework did not meaningfully include disabled Albertans in program design.

DOCUMENTED PUBLIC RECORD · This is not opinion.

What the timing of the May 21, 2026 cabinet shuffle establishes:

Forty-one days before the mandatory AISH-to-ADAP transition takes effect on July 1, 2026, Minister Nixon was promoted to President of Treasury Board and Minister of Finance — the portfolio responsible for the budget that determines what ADAP can pay out. The Minister did not leave the file. He was promoted into control of its funding.

Source: Government of Alberta, AISH Caseload Open Data, September 2025. Government of Alberta, Heritage Fund Q3 2025–26 Report. Bill 12 (2025); Alberta Legislature Hansard, December 9, 2025. Minister Nixon's letter to Genevieve Bissonette, April 3, 2026 (campaign archive). Government of Alberta ADAP Fact Sheet, May 12, 2026. CBC News, August 21, 2025, "AISH recipient, advocates worry about Alberta's new disability benefit program." Inclusion Alberta fact sheets, October and December 2025.

THE MUSTARD SEED CONNECTION — A DOCUMENTED FUNDING RELATIONSHIP

What the documented record establishes:

The Mustard Seed is a Calgary-founded charity, established 1984, that today operates on an annual budget of approximately $44 million across Alberta, British Columbia, and Saskatchewan. It was founded by Pat Nixon, the Minister's father, who served as its founder and chief executive for approximately 26 years and was later appointed to the Order of Canada.

Jason Nixon served as Executive Director of The Mustard Seed from 2006 to 2011, before entering elected politics in 2015.

His brother, Jeremy Nixon, worked at The Mustard Seed for approximately a decade and subsequently served as Minister of Seniors, Community and Social Services — the ministry then responsible for AISH — from 2022 to 2023, immediately before Jason Nixon assumed a related portfolio.

The Mustard Seed receives ongoing government funding, reported annually in its filings with the Canada Revenue Agency (Form T3010; The Mustard Seed Foundation, Charitable Registration No. 87453 2518 RR0001). One documented funding announcement on the public record allocated $762,702 to The Mustard Seed for shelter spaces.

[TO CONFIRM: exact date, dollar figure, and the announcing minister; pull the official release.]

What is reported but not established:

It has been reported in independent commentary that Jason Nixon retains a pension through The Mustard Seed from his tenure as Executive Director. This claim does not appear in a primary record verified by the campaign, and it is recorded here only as a reported claim, pending confirmation.

What this record does not claim:

This section does not allege that Minister Nixon personally profits today from The Mustard Seed, and it does not allege that any government funding to the charity was improper or unlawful. The Mustard Seed is a long-established organization that serves vulnerable people, and the work it does is real. What the record establishes is a documented sequence: the Minister's family founded and led a major, government-funded homelessness charity; the Minister himself served as its Executive Director; the Minister then became the minister responsible for AISH and the ADAP transition; and the Minister now holds the Treasury Board and Finance portfolio governing that program's budget — while government funding continues to flow to the charity and other shelters in the province close.

Source: The Mustard Seed, "Accountability" (theseed.ca); Canada Revenue Agency Charities Directorate, T3010 filings (The Mustard Seed Foundation, Charitable Reg. No. 87453 2518 RR0001); Charity Intelligence Canada summary of those filings; Legislative Assembly of Alberta member records (Jason Nixon; Jeremy Nixon); Nixon family public statements; official funding announcement (to confirm); independent commentary (pension claim — reported, not established).

[PENDING FIGURE] Government funding tied to [the homelessness sector / The Mustard Seed] is reported to have risen [304 percent] between 2019 and the present. Confirm the exact program, baseline year, endpoint, and primary source before this figure is included.

INCIDENT 2 — THE EARPLUG INCIDENT — JUNE 2019

What happened:

During a session of the Alberta Legislature in June 2019, Nixon, then Government House Leader, was observed wearing visible earplugs while opposition MLAs spoke. NDP MLA Heather Sweet raised a point of privilege, arguing that the gesture was a deliberate demonstration of disrespect toward the Legislature and members of the opposition.

DOCUMENTED PUBLIC RECORD · This is not opinion.

Resolution:

Speaker Nathan Cooper found no point of privilege was breached. The incident remains on the legislative record.

Source: CBC News, June 25, 2019, "Speaker finds no point of privilege on earplug incident."

INCIDENT 3 — THE PARKS LAND SALE CONTRADICTION — MARCH 2020

What Nixon said:

In a Calgary Herald interview published March 5, 2020, then-Minister of Environment and Parks Jason Nixon stated: "We are not selling any Crown or public land — period."

What happened next:

On March 31, 2020 — seventeen days after the interview — the Government of Alberta listed a 65-hectare parcel of Crown land east of Taber at public auction, with a starting bid of $440,000.

Source: Calgary Herald, March 5, 2020. Government of Alberta land auction records, March 31, 2020.

INCIDENT 4 — INSULIN PUMP LAUGHTER — MAY 2020

What happened:

During the May 9, 2020 legislative session, Nixon was recorded on tape laughing while an NDP MLA presented concerns about approximately 4,000 Albertans with Type 1 diabetes who had just lost coverage under the Insulin Pump Therapy Program — a program the UCP had cancelled. Twenty-five of those affected Albertans were present in the public gallery at the time.

What Nixon said:

Nixon denied laughing at those affected. He stated he was sharing a private joke with colleagues while the NDP MLA was speaking, and condemned the Official Opposition for "playing politics." He described MLA Janis Irwin's question about what was funny about Albertans losing insulin pump coverage as "ridiculous."

Source: Alberta Hansard, May 9–10, 2020, pp. 1263–1264.

INCIDENT 5 — LEGISLATURE INTIMIDATION — APRIL 2022

What happened:

As Government House Leader, Nixon was involved in a confrontation with Independent MLA Todd Loewen during debate on procedural changes. Nixon directed profane language toward Speaker Nathan Cooper and suggested restricting MLAs' ability to submit documents into the legislative record — a proposal the NDP characterized as "chilling" and Loewen called "troubling." Loewen filed a point of privilege alleging Nixon tried to intimidate him into silence.

Resolution:

Nixon's remarks were withdrawn by a deputy minister on his behalf. An apology was read into the record. Speaker Cooper declared the matter closed without sanctions.

Source: CBC News, April 26, 2022, "Alberta legislative spat over intimidation ends with apology."

PRE-POLITICAL RECORD — LEGAL AND TRIBUNAL HISTORY

The following is sourced from court records, a BC Human Rights Tribunal decision, and verified investigative journalism. Items are included because they are part of the documented public record relevant to understanding the Minister's history with accountability, women, and institutions. Where allegations have not been proven in court, they are stated as allegations. Where findings have been made by official bodies, they are stated as findings.

BC HUMAN RIGHTS TRIBUNAL — 2005–2008

What happened:

In 2005, Nixon owned Nixon Safety Consulting (NSC), a Calgary-based workplace safety firm operating in BC and Alberta. NSC was retained to provide safety services on a multi-storey condominium project in Kelowna, British Columbia, known as The Lofts. The prime contractor on the project was Navigator Development Corp., also based in Calgary. The concrete subcontractor was Con-Forte Contracting Ltd., also based in Calgary.

A 27-year-old single mother of three named Kori Harrison was hired by NSC as a safety officer on the project, beginning work in October 2005. She subsequently reported being repeatedly sexually harassed by the prime contractor's on-site project manager, Greg Ford. After Harrison reported the harassment to both the contractor and to Nixon, Nixon fired her on December 20, 2005 — two days before Christmas.

Finding:

BC Human Rights Tribunal adjudicator Kurt Neuenfeldt ruled in December 2008 that Mr. Ford had sexually harassed Ms. Harrison, that NSC had terminated her employment when she complained, and that NSC had done so at the “urging” of Navigator and with the tacit approval of Con-Forte. NSC, Navigator, Mr. Ford, and Con-Forte were ordered to pay Harrison $32,144: $14,144 in lost wages, $15,000 for injury to dignity, and $3,000 for improper conduct during the hearing.

Nixon's response (2017, in the Alberta Legislature):

“I deeply regret some of the decisions that were made by myself and my organization while handling that human resources issue.” The statement was made when the ruling resurfaced during legislative debate on NDP legislation designed to strengthen workplace harassment protections. Premier Rachel Notley noted at the time: “Instead of defending a woman who complained to him about sexual harassment, two days later he fired her.”

Source: Harrison v. Nixon Safety Consulting and others (No. 3), 2008 BCHRT 462. CBC News; HRD Canada, December 2017; Alberta Federation of Labour press release, December 2017; Georgia Straight, January 2009; Daily Commercial News (ConstructConnect), 2009.

POACHING AND PEACE BOND — ALLISON GENTRY — 2009–2011

February 6, 2009:

Nixon was part of a group who shot a deer on Allison Gentry's family property — the Sixty-One Ranch near Cremona, Alberta — near a No Hunting sign. Nixon pleaded guilty to poaching in June 2011 and paid a $500 fine.

November 6, 2009 — the confrontation:

When Gentry attempted to photograph the men, Nixon (6'8") reached through her vehicle window to grab her camera and attempted to catch her arm. According to Gentry's statement to police and subsequent peace bond documentation, Nixon said to the men with him: “Somebody just want to shoot the b—ch?”

February 2011 — peace bond signed:

The peace bond Nixon signed states: “Jason John Nixon did on the 6th day of November, 2009 at or near Cremona, in the province of Alberta, harm Allison Gentry which causes Allison Gentry to have the said fear contrary to Section 810(1) of the Criminal Code of Canada.” Nixon paid $2,000 surety and agreed to stay 500 metres from Gentry's property and have no contact with her for one year.

Nixon's public position:

“These are old claims that have already been completely and fully discredited. The allegations are a complete lie.” Nixon maintained that signing the peace bond was not an admission of guilt.

Source: Alberta court records; peace bond filed under Section 810(1) of the Criminal Code of Canada; CBC News, April 2019.

WHAT THIS RECORD ESTABLISHES

Minister Nixon's public conduct has been documented across two decades — in court records, tribunal decisions, the Alberta Legislature Hansard, and the Government of Alberta's own ministerial records. He inherits the Treasury Board and Finance portfolio as the budgetary authority for the AISH-to-ADAP transition he designed during his prior tenure as Minister of Assisted Living and Social Services.

The documented record establishes the following patterns relevant to the 79,290 Albertans whose lives will be governed by decisions made in his ministry and now in the Ministry of Finance:

- A pattern of public statements that have subsequently been contradicted by the documented record. “We are not selling any Crown or public land — period” (March 2020) was followed seventeen days later by a Crown land auction. “Extensive engagement with Albertans with disabilities” during the ADAP design period was publicly contradicted by the named disability advocacy organizations.
- A pattern of conduct toward affected populations that the Minister has subsequently characterized as misunderstood. The 2008 BC Human Rights Tribunal finding regarding a sexual-harassment victim. The 2020 insulin pump laughter incident. The documented quote from the 2011 peace bond proceeding. In each case, the Minister has characterized the documented behaviour as misinterpretation, private exchange, or settled history.
- A pattern of attempted restriction of institutional accountability mechanisms. The April 2022 legislative confrontation. The December 2025 passage of Bill 12 eliminating independent appeal rights for AISH and ADAP eligibility decisions, replacing them with a Medical Review Panel whose decisions are final.
- A pattern of institutional advancement coinciding with the implementation of reductions affecting vulnerable populations. The Minister designed ADAP during his year at Assisted Living and Social Services. He was promoted to Treasury Board and Finance forty-one days before the transition took effect. The succession was structured so that the architect of the program is now the budgetary authority over it.
- A documented relationship between the Minister’s family charity and the public purse. The Minister’s family founded and led The Mustard Seed, a major government-funded homelessness charity; the Minister served as its Executive Director from 2006 to 2011; he then became the minister responsible for AISH and the ADAP transition; and he now holds the Treasury Board and Finance portfolio governing its budget, while government funding continues to flow to the charity and other shelters close.

THE RECORD ESTABLISHES WHAT IT ESTABLISHES.

Minister Nixon was promoted to Finance and Treasury Board on May 21, 2026. The mandatory AISH-to-ADAP transition takes effect on July 1, 2026. The succession does not represent a departure from the file. It represents a vertical consolidation of authority over it. The campaign welcomes a different demonstration in writing.

SOURCES CITED IN THIS DOCUMENT

Court and tribunal records:

Harrison v. Nixon Safety Consulting and others (No. 3), 2008 BCHRT 462. British Columbia Human Rights Tribunal, December 2008.

Peace bond filed under Section 810(1) of the Criminal Code of Canada, February 2011. Alberta court records.

Alberta court records, June 2011 — guilty plea to poaching, $500 fine.

Government and legislative records:

Government of Alberta. “Premier and Cabinet.” alberta.ca, accessed May 22, 2026.

Government of Alberta. “Alberta Disability Assistance Program Fact Sheet.” alberta.ca, May 12, 2026.

Government of Alberta. AISH Caseload Open Data, September 2025.

Government of Alberta. Heritage Fund Q3 2025–26 Report.

Bill 12, Assisted Living and Social Services Statutes Amendment Act, 2025. Government of Alberta, passed December 9, 2025.

Alberta Hansard, May 9–10, 2020, pp. 1263–1264 (insulin pump incident).

Government of Alberta land auction records, March 31, 2020.

Legislative Assembly of Alberta, member records (Jason Nixon; Jeremy Nixon).

Minister Jason Nixon, letter to Genevieve Bissonette, April 3, 2026. The Alberta Disability System Breakdown archive.

Charity and financial records:

DOCUMENTED PUBLIC RECORD · This is not opinion.

Canada Revenue Agency, Charities Directorate. T3010 filings, The Mustard Seed Foundation (Charitable Reg. No. 87453 2518 RR0001).

The Mustard Seed. "Accountability," theseed.ca.

Charity Intelligence Canada. Charity profile and analysis of CRA filings, The Mustard Seed.

Media and broadcast:

CBC News, June 25, 2019, "Speaker finds no point of privilege on earplug incident."

CBC News, April 26, 2022, "Alberta legislative spat over intimidation ends with apology."

Bellefontaine, Michelle. "AISH recipient, advocates worry about Alberta's new disability benefit program." CBC News, August 21, 2025.

Markusoff, Jason. "Nixon goes to finance, LaGrange swaps health roles in Alberta cabinet shuffle." CBC News, May 21, 2026.

Calgary Herald, March 5, 2020 (Nixon Crown land interview).

Global News, May 21, 2026, "Alberta Premier Danielle Smith shuffles cabinet following 2 resignations."

Georgia Straight, January 2009. Daily Commercial News (ConstructConnect), 2009. HRD Canada, December 2017. Alberta Federation of Labour press release, December 2017.

Companion documentation:

The Alberta Disability System Breakdown. "Do You Know Your New Minister? A Documented Public Record of Nathan Neudorf." May 2026.

The Alberta Disability System Breakdown. "Income Crossover Analysis — Revised May 2026." May 2026.

The Alberta Disability System Breakdown. "AISH Evidentiary Report Series 2026." April 2026.

Inclusion Alberta. ADAP Fact Sheets, October 2025; December 2025.

This document supersedes the Jason Nixon Background File originally published as a supplementary section of the AISH Evidentiary Report Series in April 2026. The original remains part of the campaign archive. This document is the companion to the Nathan Neudorf Background File. It will be updated as the documented public record continues to develop.

Free to share. Free to print. Free to post. The record is being kept.